"What The Guidance Dept. Does For Your Child"

With the opening of our public schools approximately six weeks away, we think the following article will prove to be both interesting and beneficial to parents of school children. Our Guidance Department does a lot in shaping and molding the future of our children.

by Mrs. Harry DePew
Guidance Counselor, ACHS

Guidance programs and the idea of counselors is relatively new on the scene in American education. Perhaps this is one reason for confusion in definition of these roles. Actually guidance programs are quite different in the various schools depending on the number and kind of pupils, the interests and educational philosophy of the teachers, principals, superintendents, and school boards, facilities available and training of the counselors. Each program, however, has certain basic similarities and should be designed to meet the needs of the community it serves.

Counselors have quite a bit in common with parents. We have one guiding principle in counseling that is the same idea that each parent holds about their own child. They believe that each person is unique and deserves attention as an individual respecting their rights to privacy, to choose for themselves, and to use their abilities in ways to attain the ultimate satisfaction in a very complex society.

Guidance services can be classified into three broad areas which will be used for description of our program at ACHS. The first, and by far the most important are, is counseling. Each student is scheduled for at least one individual conference during the school year and a counselor of their choice is available to the students for requested conferences. We are now working to expand our program of group counseling. The second area is that of providing information in the categories of orientation and self-understanding, educational offerings and implications, and information for occupational choice. Examples of activities sponsored by the Guidance Dept. in these areas include Parents Night, school visitation days, group presentation of information on tests, College Night, occupational units, a visit to Central Virginia Community College and administering testing programs such as STEP-SCAT, PSAT and National Merit Tests.

The third area of guidance services involves assistance in placement. This includes counseling for appropriate occupational choices, letter of reference, transcripts and job information. This year we are sponsoring a "Career Day" on April 6th to give specific information to the job oriented seniors and to place them in direct contact with prospective area employers.

Our guidance program is intended to meet the needs of the students in their immediate environment and to help prepare them for their future roles in this community. We want to continually evaluate our department and be responsive to the changing needs of the student, the school and the community.
